What is the Matter With Adair County Schools?

Editor News:

I do not wish to appear as a pessimist or as an alarmist, nor do I wish to cast any reflection upon my predecessors in office, but I do contend that the schools of our county are far below the standard of efficiency which they should reasonably be expected to maintain. While in some respects marked improvements have been made, in others the schools are inferior to what they were twenty-five years ago; and so it is a question as to whether, on the whole, much improvement has really been made or not. I shall not enter into a comparison of the merits and demerits of the schools now, and the schools then, but I do propose to point out some wrong conditions now existing, and if possible, suggest remedies for them. And just here I wish to answer a question that has several times been put to me within the last year or so. Why do the best teachers now get but $40 per month, as they have for the past two years in Adair county, while formerly they received $50, $60, and some of them as high as $70 per month. True, the per capita was just $4.00 in 1912, while in 1911 it was $4.40. But this should not make so much difference. I confess that at first this puzzled me until I sat down and made some figures. The fact that under the new way of paying teachers the merest tyro teaching, with a third-class certificate and no experience, teaching a third-class school must have $35 per month, answers the question in part. This increase of salary for the third-class teacher is subtracted from that of the first-class teacher. There are a number of districts in Adair county where under the old per capita method of paying teachers the teacher would get about $125 for six months work whereas now she gets $210. The difference of $85 in each case is taken from the wages of the better qualified teachers. Then take into consideration the fact that of the 78 white districts in our county only 49 are large enough to meet the requirements of the law, except in case of emergency, and you have the rest of the answer. Strictly speaking, we may say there are not more than 50 legal districts in the county, outside of our Columbia Graded School and the ten colored sub-districts. Under this state of affairs the best teacher with first-class certificate, State Certificate, or State Diploma, with Normal training and large experience gets only $5.00 per month more than the poorest teacher with third-class certificate, no experience and no training. This will certainly drive the better teachers out of the profession in no very long time. This places no premium upon merit. There is no incentive to the boy or girl to prepare in earnest for teaching, when the best talent, the highest aspiration, the complete preparation, and the ripest experience can rise only $5.00 per month above the lowest in the profession. But what is the remedy? This is easier to ask than to answer. The first suggestion I would make is this: Reduce the number of districts. Make them all legal districts, if possible. Make no new districts, unless in so doing one or two old ones can be abolished, and the others affected by the formation of the new district be left at least as large as before, if not larger. The 78 white districts should be reduced to 60 in number. Outside of our Columbia Graded School, the average salary of the teacher this year in Adair county is $37.08 per month counting assistants and colored teachers. By reducing the number of districts to 60 we can raise the average to $46 per month. I do not say that this reducing the number of districts to 60 will be done or even that it can be done, but the matter will be fully investigated just as soon as I can get the time and opportunity to do so. I am opposed to the cutting and slicing process, and my policy shall be, as far as it is consistent with the best interests of the children and patrons, to lessen the number of districts and make the small ones remaining larger and larger. Tobias Huffaker, Superintendent.

One hundred and two years ago his great grandfather, Samuel Robinson, was pastor of the Presbyterian church in this town. His father was born in Columbia and was the pastor of the congregation here in 1851. The above statements were made Sunday by Dr. Cheek, from the pulpit, there being only a few in the congregation acquainted with the ancient though local history. Dr. Cheek is a strong minister and at this time is President of the Synodical Board of Missions. While in Columbia he was entertained at the homes of Judge H. C. Baker, Mr. J. P. Pay as You Go.

The world is turning to-day to a cash system. The man who buys as well as the man who sells is seeking a place where cash is appreciated and the average dealer is hunting the "cash order trade." The old-time twelve month credit system is a thing of the past. It did not give satisfaction to the seller or the buyer. Many things are bought on long credit, that if the cash had been required they would not have bought at all. The young generation should be taught to pay as they go. They will turnless to style and more to the real problems of life. The motto of 1914 should be "pay as you go."—Owen County Democrat.

We have received a reply to Prof. Huffaker's temperance article from Dr. J. T. Jones, but the management of this paper has decided that a sufficiency has been said upon the subject. Both Dr. Jones and Prof. Huffaker have had their say. There must be a stopping point and the time is ripe for it, as Dr. Jones last article would call another reply from Prof. Huffaker.

From the Board of Health.

To the people of Kentucky:—

A few cases of small pox exist in most of the counties of Kentucky. This loathsome disease can only occur in people who have not been vaccinated. Quarantine against individual cases of small pox is expensive and useless, as it only gives a false sense of security. No one who has been properly vaccinated at least three places on the arm, has ever had small pox in Kentucky. There has never been an arm nor a life lost from vaccination in Kentucky. Properly done by a competent physician, it is devoid of danger, is inexpensive, and is the only preventive against small pox. More money has been spent, most of it uselessly, in combating small pox in the last few years in Kentucky, than has been expended in thirty years in protecting our people from typhoid fever, consumption and the other common diseases of everyday life, and yet more deaths have occurred from either typhoid or consumption in the past year than small pox, yellow fever and cholera, combined, have caused in a century.

The Board is frequently asked why the law requires vaccination at three points an inch apart on the arm. Because experience teaches in Germany that no one having three or more good scars has had small pox. Vaccination does its work of protection through the glands under the arm. Charging these glands from three points instead of one makes them manufacture more of the protective element.

As soon as a case of small pox occurs, every individual exposed should be properly vaccinated or revaccinated, and there should be no second case of the disease. It is unnecessary to quarantine the well, provided they have been successfully vaccinated.

It is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $100 to $1,000 for any one having an eruption even resembling small pox, to go on any public street or road or any place where well people are. If the court officials will enforce this law and the one requiring vaccination, they will actually put into practice some real economy instead of the variety it is popular to talk about at election time. To prevent not only small pox, but the commoner and more dangerous diseases that cause most of our sickness and death in Kentucky, we need simply real education, actual law enforcement, and a health officer in each jurisdiction who can devote his entire time to, and earn a living by preventing sickness and death instead of treating people for unnecessary sickness.

It is a violation of the law to be unvaccinated, and it is also unlawful for any person, firm or company to employ any unvaccinated person in any work for salary or wages of any kind. Intelligent people will be vaccinated without compulsion because it is reasonable, necessary and lawful; and health and other officials are urged to see that those who are not intelligent be compelled to be vaccinated so that the unnecessary drain on the city and county treasuries and on the purses of the people themselves from this entirely unnecessary pestilence be stopped. Small pox, like murder, will only be prevented when the law is enforced. In Germany they have no small pox because they enforce compulsory education and compulsory vaccination.

This Board urges all the people of Kentucky who read this to be vaccinated themselves at once, or be revaccinated if they have not been vaccinated within seven years, and to see that their families, neighbors and dependents are vaccinated immediately.

Fresh, reliable vaccine virus may be secured from the State Board of Health, Bowling Green Kentucky, for $6.50 for each one hundred points.

By order of the Board:
John G. South, President.

A. T. McCormack, Secretary.

Anxiety Breaks Men.

It is a well known fact that protracted anxiety without rest, breaks more men than does hard intellectual effort. Statistics regarding the lives of stock-brokers in a certain city show that nearly every person who lived a sober life and continuously studied the ups and downs of the money market failed either mentally or physically in a short time—less than a dozen years—ultimately disappearing from active life. On the other hand, the men who were operators of great skill and coolness and who lived regularly most of the time, but occasionally gave way to the drink habit, lived longer and had fewer mental disorders. This, of course, cannot be construed into an argument in favor of drinking even occasionally, but was a strong indication of the benefit coming from the occasional complete relaxation from intense mental anxiety.

Kentucky.

(By Robt. Lee Campbell.)

There is a State in this old nation,
A State that I dearly love,
And I'm inclined to believe that it has no equal.

Except in that Land above,
And if you possess a home in that State,

I consider you to be quite lucky,
For you'll find it quite true,
That there is no other State
Half the equal of Kentucky.

She has soil of limestone formation,
And also of sandy loam,
And her mountain scenery is far superior

To the Cithaerons of Rome,
She grows the famous bluegrass, hemp
and corn,

And for esculents she is quite lucky,
So come all who are true.

You are welcome I am sure,
To make your home in Kentucky.

All up and down the whole creation,
Or anywhere I may rove,
I'll tell the world that Kentucky has no equal,

Except in that Land above.
Her horses are fine, her men they are brave,

Yes, you will always find they are plucky,
And you will find I am sure,
That there's no other lands
So fair as those of Kentucky.

Poisonous Woods.

Poison ivy, nettles and poison sumac are by no means the only plants which have a poisonous effect on the human skin.

Poisonous substances exist in many trees, and even after they have been cut and sawed a sufficient quantity of the poison remains in the lumber so that workmen who handle it are liable to infection.

Amberwood is impregnated with a powerful poison, and the Asiatic satinwood is known to be of poisonous nature.

What is known as cocobolo wood contains a poisonous substance. The placing of fine sawdust of this wood on the moist skin causes first a violent smarting. Following this red spots or pimples appear accompanied by inflammation of that part of the skin followed by scaling. The sawdust of the Mexican blue-gum is harmful when the skin is especially sensitive, and has been known to produce painful eruption.

We believe that a great majority of the brethren feel as we do about this, and would rather patronize a brother Mason did they know who you were, where you were, and what you had for sale.—Masonic Home Journal.

Luke McLuke Says:

Love may be blind. But if there are two suitors and one is poor and the other wealthy, a girl never gropes her way towards the poor man.

After a 16-year-old Princess has had one experience at puppy love she imagines that the Story of Her Life would startle the world.

Nothing else ever looks as dirty as a dirty white collar.

The reason a girl is so proud of a dimple is because she does not realize that some day it will be nothing but a wrinkle.

And we would all enjoy a funny story a whole lot more if the man who is telling it wouldn't spit all over us when he laughs.

As soon as a man gets the idea into his head that the firm can't get along without him, the Firm attempts the experiment and finds that it can.

The skeleton in the Closet usually wears a skirt.

Every married woman knows that if she sent her husband for eggs he would bring home every unborn chicken in the grocery store.

Beauty may be only skin deep. But so is the knin that covers it.

When a girl tells you not to spend your money on theatre tickets and candy for her, you might as well go down and see what the installment furniture man will fix you up a flat for.

The old-fashioned woman who knew all about babies and nothing about Sex Problems seemed to get along all right somehow or other.—Enquirer.

RURAL ORGANIZATION.

That rural life should be organized and can be organized is clear. Various agencies are definitely attacking its intellectual side. We are effectively studying rural physical improvements, especially good roads. The country roads are prerequisite for many important rural undertakings. They are prerequisite for better marketing, for better schools, for comfortable living and for the promotion of social life.

There is obvious need of organization for sanitary purposes and for social development. Whether all these shall come through definite attack of private or public agencies or as byproducts makes no difference; they must come. We can no longer entertain the notion that rural life shall remain isolated, disjointed and unorganized. Its organization is a national, economic and social necessity. It is more difficult to organize a scattered rural population than a concentrated one, but the great need is to give the rural population at least approximately the primary advantages which the town enjoys. The town is organization, and because of its organization and of its consequent advantages it has tended to attract to it the most ambitious youth of the country. The task of rural organization is difficult, but as the greatest educator of America has said, "The difficulty of a task constitutes no reason for declining it." And in this way lies the largest promise for national upbuilding and stability.—David P. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

BANKERS AID RURAL LIFE.

State and Federal Help Urged In This Direction.

Resolutions providing for changes in the conditions of rural life in this country, which it was stated would decrease the burdens and increase the opportunities of the farmer and his family, were adopted at the third annual meeting of the committee of agricultural development and education of the American Bankers' association.

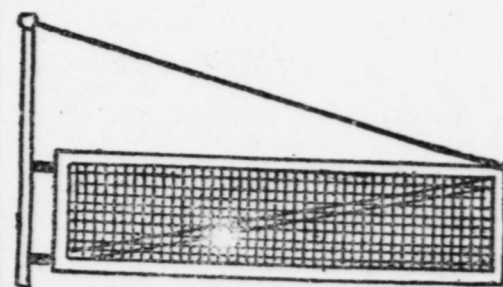

Vocational training in the public schools, plans to make the marketing of farm products easier and more profitable and federal aid to make farm demonstration work more general throughout the country were among the things urged.

The resolutions in part follow:

"Our committee, being especially concerned with agriculture and instruction in that line in the country schools, realizes that it needs and must have the largest measure of aid to the end that the country boys and girls may be placed on an equal footing with those in town. Therefore we urge both state and federal aid in this direction. "As farm demonstration work through local or country demonstrators has proved to be the most practical and effective means of improving farming methods and as the government has contributed thousands of dollars toward such work in certain states and little or nothing in others, we endorse and earnestly urge legislation on the part of congress that will provide generous federal aid in all the states for such work."

An Up to Date Gate.

The frame of this gate is made from boards six inches wide and an inch thick. Of course the gate frame is cut to any size the maker desires. One brace is placed corner ways across between the frames. Field fencing is used for the body of the gate. It is cut the right size with wire nippers and attached to the frame with small staples. The gate is suspended from a long pole set solid in the ground. To make this post solid set it in concrete. The gate is fastened to the pole with large hinges, and a wire cable or small chain holds the weight of the gate up to the top of the pole.

WINTER FEED FOR FOWLS.

An ample as well as a varied supply of green feed to hens during the winter is important for the health of the fowls. Its value does not lie in the amount of nutriment it contains, but as an agent in digestion. Fowls eat more when fed green food than otherwise. Vegetables induce increased eating, hence increased egg production.

Nearly all the common vegetables are relished by fowls, and they should be fed at regular intervals. Mangels are easy to raise and keep well. Cabbage is a good food; the hens like it, and it does not favor the egg. Turnips are an excellent vegetable for fowls when grown right, stored and cooked. Rape is an excellent green food to plant in the runs. Potatoes are good only when boiled. As a rule, they are too expensive to feed to poultry. Onions, when they can be had, are an excellent feed and, like lettuce, are excellent for chicks. Silage may be used, provided that only a small quantity is fed at first until the hens become thoroughly accustomed to it.

Burleson and His Fence.

When Postmaster General Burleson was a member of the house he rushed into his committee room one day and announced that he had at last obtained the iron fence around the old Pennsylvania station in Washington.

A cub reporter who happened to be present wrote a story about the fence and after stating the facts expressed the opinion that it would soon adorn one of the public parks in Burleson's district in Texas.

The Texas correspondents wired the story to their papers, and soon Burleson was deluged with telegrams.

Encountering the cub reporter, Burleson angrily demanded to know what he had written about the fence.

"What's the matter?" innocently asked the reporter.

"What's the matter?" shouted Burleson. "I paid $125 for that fence at public auction; I paid $100 to have it painted black and have the tops gilded; I paid $75 freight on it to my home in Austin, Tex., where it was to be placed on my home grounds. What's the matter? Why, now I've got to give the concerned thing away!" —Washington Star.

The Little Things of Life.

Around the little things of life
Are those of which we cannot boast!
A world of storm and sunshine lies,
Yet those too busy seldom see
The tired look in other eyes.

Around the little things of life
A wealth of loving memories center,
And joys undreamt of by the world
The humblest dwelling places enter.

Around the little things of life,
Connected by a thread so slender,
Are long lost smiles and bygone tears
Which helped to make our hearts more tender.

Alas, how many things in life
Are those of which we cannot boast!
Actions and words we think our best—
How poor and weak they are at most!

More full of love, oh, may they be,
Less full of self as in the past!
Help us, dear Lord, to offer thee
More perfect "little things" at last.
—M. Wymann.

Took Him at His Word.

The late King Edward, who so highly appreciated wit, even when, as sometimes happened, the joke went against himself, was once very neatly "scored off" by a lady whom later he deservedly esteemed for her many good works. She had just been presented to him and was somewhat nervous. To put her at her ease his majesty said, "Oh, Miss —, I want to have a long chat with you, but if I should unfortunately bore you pray tell me so." The king, who was an adroit cross examiner, wished to ascertain the young lady's age, which he had no intention of divulging. "You have already said you were born at —," said the monarch. "May I ask in what year?" "You bore me, sir!" was the smiling reply, and his majesty took the checkmate in the greatest good humor.

Giddy Girl.

In Mr. Thorold's "Life of Henry La-bouchere" this story is quoted: The Grand Duchess of Tuscany had a venerable maid of honor about seventy years of age. She had piercing black eyes and looked like an old post chaise painted up and with new lamps. "How old do you think I am?" she once asked me with a smirking smile that caused my blood to run cold. I hesitated and then said, "Twenty." "Flatterer," she replied, tapping me with her fan. "I am twenty-five."

The Busy Man's Romance.

He was a very busy man, and she was a very pretty girl. She insisted upon having a love letter every day. She got it.

"You write the loveliest letters, dear!" she said. "And when you are so very, very busy all the time I think it is splendid of you to think of me!"

"I don't forget you," he replied. "My secretary has instructions to write you a letter for me to sign every morning. He is a most efficient and capable young man."

"And you don't know how greatly I appreciate the flowers you send me every week."

"I'm glad you get them. I told my secretary to make a memo, to send you some every Saturday."

"How systematic! And it is so thoughtful of you to think of the plays I like best and the books I prefer."

"It's a pleasure to know you are pleased. My secretary gets the tickets and picks out the books. He is a very capable fellow."

Two months later the very busy man said:

"Hang him! I don't mind so much his eloping with my fiancée, but how in thunder can I break in another secretary?"

Laughter and Tears.

One of London's bright young journalists who went to interview Mme. Sarah Bernhardt recently tried to converse with the great actress in her own language. His French was so bad, however, that at last, in despair, madame switched the conversation into English.

She speaks English fairly well, but after a minute or two she made a bad blunder, and the journalist was unable to restrain a smile.

"Why do you laugh?" madame asked him.

"I'm awfully sorry," he apologized, "but, as a matter of fact, your English made me laugh a little."

"Mon Dieu," gasped madame; "my English made you laugh a little! But your French made me weep a lot!"

Whom Should We Patronize?

Should a Mason patronize a brother Mason instead of giving his trade to some person or firm who are not members of the fraternity? asks the K. C. Masonic Herald. This is a question we often hear debated, but to the writer there is but one answer—Yes.

You will hear a brother say, "I didn't join Masonry for the purpose of getting their patronage." True, you didn't, brother, not if you are a good Mason, yet at the same time, what are the teachings of Masonry? Isn't the "Brotherhood of Man" the foundation of the Masonic organization? Now, what does "Brotherhood" mean? It means that every man who has made application for membership in a Masonic lodge has been investigated by a committee appointed for the purpose, and that not only they have found him worthy, but not even one member has cast a ballot against his becoming what? A "brother." He's a brother, then isn't he? We have willingly accepted him as such, but how much of a brother is he? Just enough so that we perhaps call him "brother" in addressing him?

No, brother, it means vastly more than that; otherwise Masonry could not have withstood all the hard knocks of the past centuries and stand where it does today. It means that we have accepted him as a brother in every sense of the word, and that he should remain such as long as he shall conduct himself in a brotherly manner.

Suppose you wanted to buy a piece of furniture and you had a brother—a blood relation—in the furniture business in your town; whom would you go to first when you are ready to buy? To the brother, of course, and you

In these days of progress when every avenue of enterprise is opening new opportunities for intelligent, active people, probably none equals the farm. The fact that every farm product has increased in price, that the world is not over supplied, that the larger part of productive land is under private control, and but little yet to be parceled out to farm owners, ought to impress every farmer of the importance, of the necessity of intense farming. From the earth man's supplies must come, and since the demand for agricultural products is increasing all the while, it is a plain fact that the supplies must increase to maintain even present high prices. Should the output of the farms remain a few years as they are now, or should there be a shrinkage, the effect on prices would become extremely burdensome to the average wage earner. The solution of the situation as we see it, and the most profitable one to the farmer and the just one to posterity is the building and developing the productive powers of the land. It is not what you attempt to do, but what you really accomplish, that adds profit and pleasure. The man who makes more corn on five acres, land being equal, is doing much more good for himself and the world than the one who cultivates ten acres. This is now the accepted theory throughout the country, and leading agriculturalists are doing all within their power to stir up, educate and induce farmers everywhere, to adopt scientific methods. The appeal is made through agricultural papers, by encouragement from State and Nation. Many counties in the various States are awake to the real situation, and have heartily joined in the movement by employing experts in agriculture to demonstrate their theories and to awaken the average farmer to the great possibilities easy within his reach. Their methods reduced to plain facts, are, build your land and increase your production—make two ears of corn grow where only one heretofore has grown. It is the purpose of the farm demonstrator to show how this can be done, and to induce the farmer to do it. Since this county has no demonstrator, since it says to the world that our farmers know their business, that they are capable of handling the situation we trust that evidence to warrant this position, will be abundant next fall. Good farming is good sense energetically applied within the lines that bring the very best results. It is not so much what a man knows as what he does that produce results, and since the wide spread of agricultural papers and the intelligent lecturers sent out by the agricultural department, we believe that some wonderful results would happen in this county, if our farmers would do what they know they ought to do. We need more determination, more enthusiasm and more pride on our farms than any thing else.

The Glasgow Times of the 3rd inst, contained a surprise for the Democrats of Adair—the announcement that Judge Samuel E. Jones would not be a candidate for Appellate Judge in the Third district. For more than a year his name had been prominently mentioned in connection with the race, and his friends generally believed that he would enter the contest for the Democratic nomination. There is not a doubt but he would have been a formidable candidate, his ability for the place never having been called in question. He has served the 10th Judicial district, as the Judge of the Circuit court for several terms, and has been a very satisfactory Judge for all the people. As a Jurist he stands high and is the peer of any man in this section of Kentucky. Judge Jones is not generally acquainted in this immediate section, but those who know him well, speak of him as being without a stain and having all the elements which go to make up a fair and impartial Judge. Eight years ago, when his name was mentioned for the Appellate bench, this county was outspoken for him, and at this time, although the voters of this section were unanimously for our own candidate, the Hon. Rollin Hurt, there was no feeling, except one of kindness, for Judge Jones. The Glasgow Times intimates strongly that Judge Jones will stand for re-election to his present position, and from the best information we have, he will have no opposition, as he is exceedingly popular in every county comprising the district.

Mr. Edwin Rhorer, son of Hon. M. H. Rhorer, is an applicant for the post-office at Middlesboro, and his friends throughout the Eleventh Congressional district, are anxious for him to receive the appointment. He comes from Democratic families on both sides, and since he reached his majority he has been active in every campaign for the success of the Democratic ticket. He has not only been a worker in the ranks himself, but his brothers and father have spent their time and means to promote the interest of Democratic principles. This is the first time Mr. Rhorer has ever asked the administration for position, and his many friends feel that his claim should be recognized. He is a young man of correct habits, possessing attainments that peculiarly fit him for a post-master. His many Adair county friends would be glad to hear of his appointment, and we feel sure that to select him the administration would make no mistake. Honorable in all his dealings, courteous to all mankind, a true Kentucky gentleman, full of energy, the character of man whose every day walk pleases the people.

Rev. O. P. Bush filled his last appointment here and we understand that he has accepted a call at Milltown, and we regret very much that he will not be with us the remainder of the year.

About this time of year a great many people begin to manifest a lively interest in the roads. It is not difficult to understand why the interest in the road question arises at this particular time. The agitation starts in the mud-bound communities. The farmer has some grain he wants to get to market, or he has to move to move to another farm this year. The merchants find that trade is slack, and realize the fact that the farmers can not come to town to shop. The physician, the liveryman, the rural mail carriers, the teamsters, and all who are compelled to use the highways stop about and fight the mud. When the roads get dry and people can begin to travel in automobiles, buggies, and other vehicles, they think then that the roads are fine and that they will continue to be fine always. But why do we not go to work, when we can work, and make good roads. Like the man who had no roof on his house, was asked why? He said: "When it was raining he could not put it on, and when the sun was shining he did not need it."

Bowling Green.

Editor News:—

As usual I enjoyed my visit at Columbia and Gradyville. In company with Strong Hill, the capitalist of Gradyville, I proceeded to Edmonton; and when I settled with Strong for my trip, he noticed that I had two dollars left, and he informed me that for the remaining two he would take me to Glasgow. I said, "all right," and if I could have produced two more dollars he would have brought me to Bowling Green, and for money enough, he would have conveyed me to Mexico.

I arrived in Bowling Green O. K., stopping with my daughter, Mrs. Claypool. She has two of cousin Nona Dohoney's daughters boarding with her, who are in school—Ina and Tommie—and four other fine girls of Larue county.

This is the greatest school town I ever saw. Most all the families, no matter how wealthy, are willing to take roomers or boarders, thus advancing the interest of the schools; and it sure takes lots of places, as three thousand are out of town pupils.

Mrs. Yates, Mabel, Mrs. Effie Purdy, Mrs. W. A. Thornton, Walter Burke, Frank Bell all came down for a few day's visit. Mrs. Claypool's house has been taxed to its capacity, yet we have all had a fine week.

From here I will go to Tennessee.

truly,

J. C. Yates.

She was a devout Christian, a leader in the Sunday School at Breeding, and was beloved by all who knew her, but she has gone to rest with God. She was buried at her old home place, at Chance. WE HAVE FAITH IN THIS STOMACH REMEDY.

A woman customer said to us the other day: "Say, you ought to tell everyone in town about Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. I would myself if I could." That set us to thinking. So many people have used them and have so enthusiastically sounded their praises both to us and their friends, that we had an idea you all knew about them. But, in the chance that some of you who suffer from indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia, or some other stomach complaint, don't know about them—we are writing this.

They contain Bismuth and Pepsin, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They soothe and comfort the stomach, promote the secretion of gastric juice, help to quickly digest the food and convert it into rich, red blood, and improve the action of the bowels. We believe them to be the best remedy made for indigestion and dyspepsia. We certainly wouldn't offer them to you entirely at our risk unless we felt sure they would do you a lot of good. If Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets do not relieve your indigestion, check the heartburn, and make it possible for you to eat what you like whenever you like, come back and get your money.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores and in this town only at our store. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.—Paul Drug Co., Columbia, Ky.

Absurd Prejudices.

The Fulton leader makes the following sensible observations about the relations that should prevail between residents of the county and dwellers in the towns:

"The time has passed in Kentucky or anywhere in this section when the people in the country can be influenced by the old-time efforts of the demagogue to array them against the people in town. The town needs the country, and the country needs the town. They are mutually helpful to each other. That spirit might have had some effect 40 years ago, but in this in age of telephones, rural routes carrying the daily news of the world to every neighborhood in the country, the people are too well informed and up-to-date to give any thought to such a thing. The man who would attempt such a scheme ought to be bored for the simples."

This is all true as preaching. There used to be a lot of absurd prejudice of this kind but it is less and less in evidence as the years go by. The town and the county are interdependent and there is no reason why the utmost cordiality should not exist between them.—State Journal.

NIGH UNTO DEATH

By ALVA R. HUNTINGTON

It was at a time when the trans-mississippi country was developing, and instead of the iron horse, with its train dashing along at the rate of fifty miles an hour, the stagecoach lumbered at the rate of five or six. One of these coaches left Denver one morning, struck the mountains at Golden City, mounted to the highest point and moved on downward and upward alternately toward Georgetown.

On the top of the coach a gentleman and his family were enjoying the scenery. The driver sat on his box trying to keep awake, for he had been drinking, while beside him sat a young man whose costume denoted that he was a resident of the region. The coach reached the top of an ascent, and the road in front wound downward in one of those frequent dips in the mountains. It had begun the descent, and the young man sitting beside the driver, noticing that he had failed to put on the brake, looked aside at him to see what it meant. The fellow was asleep and had not only failed to "brake," but had let go his hold on the reins, which were now down on the pole.

A punch in the ribs awoke the driver, who, seeing the reins dangling from the pole and the coach rolling rapidly down the crooked road, jumped from his seat, preferring rather to be injured by a fall on the stony road than to be hurled over a precipice he knew to be at a turn farther down.

There were shrieks from the women passengers, while the men were paralyzed. But among the latter there was one exception. The young man left alone on the box let himself down on the pole, gathered up the reins, climbed back on to the box and put on the brake. The horses were by this time so wild and the speed so great that it was very difficult to control the one and lessen the other. Not an eighth of a mile distant was the turn in the road, with a gulf a thousand feet deep on one side. The cries and shrieks had ceased with the effort thus far made to regain control, and every eye was fixed on the danger ahead, every breath held in terror.

The man on the box kept a firm hand on the reins and pushed with all his strength with his right foot on the break. There was a lessening of the speed, but would it be reduced sufficiently to go safely round the curve? The hearts of those whose lives were at stake were throbbing in time with the jumping of the horses. When the turn was reached the velocity was still so great that there was little hope. The women recommenced to shriek. "Stop that!" said the driver. "You'll excite the horses."

The cries ceased. There was no sound except what came from the horses' hoofs and the creaking of the coach, while every one held with a tight grip to his seat and looked with straining eyes at the gulf before him. The driver guided the horses as near the rock on the inner side as he dared, for should he hit the coach would be knocked over the precipice. Notwithstanding his effort so great was its swing when it made the turn that a hind wheel slid over a slope a few feet from the edge. The driver gave a yell to the horses and threw the long lash of his whip among them with a crack. Every animal gave a jump, the wheel came back on level ground, and the rest of the turn was made in safety.

The final effort caused the horses to break forth again, and again they must be brought under control. But now the road was comparatively straight and soon the inclination began to lessen. In a few minutes the bottom of the dip was reached, and the coach was brought to a standstill. Then the driver was in folded in the arms of those on the outside of the coach, both men and women.

An hour later the coach drove up to the hotel at Idaho Springs and all alighted. The gentleman who was traveling with his wife and family took the driver aside for a private interview.

"You have saved the lives of a coach load of persons," he said, "including myself, my wife and family. Had it not been for your coolness and courage we would all have met with a frightful death. What can I do for you? I'm rich and my fortune is at your disposal."

"You owe me nothing, sir," said the young man, with a British accent. "My own life was in jeopardy. In saving myself I saved the others."

"You could have left the coach as the cowardly driver did."

To this the young man made no reply. "Come," resumed the gentleman: "anything you ask that is in my power to grant shall be granted."

The young man hesitated, then said: "I don't belong here; I came from England. You know the younger sons in England must shift for themselves. I came to this country, where I am not known, and can turn my hand to anything. Being fond of horses, I drove a stage. I have left that and am going up to Georgetown to start on a prospecting tour."

But the young man's plans were changed. He went to the east, entered the banking house of the man whose life he saved and is now wealthy. He says that he went just near enough to the edge of a precipice to grasp a fortune without going over.

A Remedy No Family Should Do Without

No matter how healthy a human being may be it is safe to say that not many months are passed without some obstruction of the bowels, in other words, constipation, even if only temporary. The bloating, the dull feeling may start after the evening meal. If a laxative is not taken that night it is certain that sleep will not be sound, and you will awaken unrefreshed.

Hence, it is important for you and for all the members of your family that a good, reliable laxative be always kept in the house for just such emergency. It is sure to be needed, and when needed it is at hand. No family that is careful of its health can do without such a remedy. But the question of which remedy to have on hand is also of vast importance.

The laxative most highly recommended by the majority of intelligent Americans as being best for babies and grownups is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

It is a liquid laxative- tonic, mild, and never gripes, is effective on robust people and can be given with safety to an infant. Children like it because of these gentle qualities and because it is pleasant to the taste.

It is the best all-around remedy you can have in the house for any disorder of the stomach, liver and bowels, and many people like R. H. Morgan, Price, Tenn., and Mrs. H. C. Davidson, Wartburg, Tenn., say they would as soon be without the necessities as without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 405 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

Rip Van Winkle.

Among the frequent cases of lapse of memory, one has been recorded of a man in New York state who for years was a prosperous lead merchant. He is a modern Rip Van Winkle. Ten years ago he developed a mental malady that left his mind a blank.

He virtually became a hermit in his home, and his actions were those of a somnambulist. His body was active, but his mentality was asleep. On frequent occasions when persuaded to go out of doors he would march past friends without a sign of recognition. It was thought that his case was hopeless until, three months ago, he suddenly showed a mental quickening. His mind on what happened ten years ago is as fresh as if things happened yesterday, but what happened while he was ill is a blank.

Chronic Stomach Trouble Cured.

There is nothing more discouraging than a chronic disorder of the stomach. Is it not surprising that many suffer for years with such an ailment when a permanent cure is within their reach and may be had for a trifle? "About one year ago," says P. H. Beck, of Wakelee, Mich., "I bought a package of Chamberlain's Tablets, and since using them I have felt perfectly well. I had previously used any number of different medicines, but none of them were of any lasting benefit." For sale by Paul Drug Co. Ad

"It certainly has no equal for la grippe, bad colds, liver and stomach troubles. I firmly believe Black-Draught saved my little girl's life. When she had the measles, they went in on her, but one good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught made them break out, and she has had no more trouble. I shall never be without

If you suffer from any of these complaints, try Black-Draught. It is a medicine of known merit. Seventy-five years of splendid success proves its value. Good for young and old. For sale everywhere. Price 25 cents.

Mt. Pleasant No. 2.

Being in a retrospective, as well as a communicative mood to-night, I will give your readers a bit of history concerning this village.

It is considerably over a century old, and has, as the "Rock of Ages," withstood these many winters, and rests firm on its foundation.

It lies directly North of Columbia, on the Springfield road, as well as on one of the air line R. R., the distance being four miles, half of which is a good turnpike road, the other half being a concrete auto road, less that part which is traversed by Camp Creek. Guess our County Road Engineer will attend to the creek part.

It has a splendid citizenship—composed of some of the counties forefather's off-spring—the Callisons, Cundiffs, Hoods, Squires, Murrell's Smiths, Butlers and others.

It has a magnificent church edifice, an excellent Sunday School Superintendent and a very interesting school, a splendid music teacher and church organist, and all we lack of being complete in this line is a pastor. Can't we have one?

A good school building, well furnished, with bright pupils, and we have always had splendid teachers, and we hope the Educational Board will supply us with the same kind this year.

We have a blacksmith and wood worker, a corn mill and crusher, a shingling machine and wood saw combined, all run by gasoline and not "gas."

We also have an up-to-the-minute general store, conducted by two gentlemen of character and standing, viz: Messrs. W. H. Cundiff and G. J. Butler, ably assisted by two lady salesmen, Mrs. Butler and Miss Rena Cundiff, who take great delight and pains in waiting on the trade. Their medium of exchange is anything from a cross-eyed "Rooster," to one of "Uncle Sam's

Some other things we have are an ex-merchant, ex-smith and ex-huxster, who decided to quit these occupations and engage in destroying tobacco worms—perhaps a wise conclusion, or otherwise, as some have made good with tobacco, and some to be tried.

We have a citizen that hulls out our bread and keeps our potatoes (sweet,) but nothing doing in the potato line this year.

We have a fine line of young men, all workers, and true to the mark.

Now we have some other things that I could mention, but I will tell you of a few that we haven't. We have not an "old maid" in the clearing, not a single "sissie" under sweet sixteen or over sixty-five. We have no loafers, boot-leggers, nor jacks of all trades. Now aint this going some?

There is one thing we want bad, and one we don't want at all—the former is a milliner, the latter an undertaker.

I came very near not mentioning some very important personages and enterprises we also have—a daily mail line, telephone connection with the business world and also telephone connection with every body's business, but the greatest of all is a "professional grumbler." I associate with her daily, and know whereof I speak, but I love her just the same.

The Forty Year Test.

An article must have exceptional merit to survive for a period of forty years. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy was first offered to the public in 1872. From a small beginning it has grown in favor and popularity until it has attained a world wide reputation. You will find nothing better for a cough or cold. Try it and you will understand why it is a favorite after a period of more than forty years. It not only gives relief—it cures. For sale by Paul Drug Co. Ad

THE MAN WITH THE WOODEN LEG

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

Of the six passengers who alighted from the stagecoach at the Acorn inn, in Blissfield, one April evening, one was a man with a wooden leg. The stranger registered as John Gordon of Chicago, and, when he gave out that he might remain in Blissfield for several weeks, everybody wondered what business could have brought him there. After three or four days it leaked out that the man was a government agent, who had come to watch the men who had been stealing timber off certain lands. That gave him increased respect, and yet even I, a schoolboy, noticing the man's steel gray eyes, firm set jaw and thin lips, could have told that he was cruel, if not bad hearted.

He had lost his left leg at the knee, and the substitute was not a cork leg, but a crotch and a stick—the plainest and cheapest sort of an affair. His dress was also very plain, his speech that of the common order.

"The man with the wooden leg," as he came to be generally spoken of, had been in town about a week when one of the leading merchants was robbed of about a thousand dollars in cash. The local constable did a great deal of talking, but struck no clew, and in his desperation he asked Gordon to assist him, believing no doubt that a government officer of any sort ought to be more or less posted in detective work. Gordon seemed to think the matter over for awhile and then replied:

"The case is as plain as the nose on your face. The merchant's son took the money, and after this thing quiets down he will go off to St. Louis to have a good time. I'd stake my life he's got every dollar of the missing cash securely hidden away somewhere."

Ten or twelve days passed, and then came a terrible tragedy.

The richest man in Blissfield was Squire Higgins. He owned the woolen mills, a store and several houses and had money to lend. He was a widower, but lived with his son and wife. His room was on the ground floor, while all others slept upstairs. He had no safe, but kept his money in a tin box on a shelf in a closet. He had a bank account over at Medina, ten miles away, but often had $1,000 or more in the house. One evening when the others were ready to go to bed he announced that he had some business to attend to and was seated at his desk in the sitting room when the others retired. About midnight the daughter-in-law heard a fall and a groan downstairs, and when her husband went down to investigate the squire was found dead on the floor, having been stabbed no less than five times in the body.

House and grounds were searched, but the murderer had escaped, and he had also taken with him the cash box, which contained about $700.

Gordon seemed to take a lively interest in the murder. No outside help would have been called in and the murderer might have gone his way but for the arrival of another stranger. He was, as it happened, a first class detective, who was just then employed in tracing a missing man. The crime was a day old when he reached Blissfield. He heard all the particulars from the loungers at the inn and then volunteered to look the ground over.

This was a courtesy on his part which the sheriff could not refuse, and after supper he was taken to the house.

The tracks in the garden were still fresh when the detective took hold of the work, and in three minutes he had made up his mind to something. He had little to say to any of the men, explaining that he had not yet completed his investigations, but as he left the house to return to the inn, while I followed at a respectful distance, he turned down a quiet lane, beckoned me to follow, and when we were alone he lighted his pipe and asked:

"Boy, do you know any man in town who is lame in the left leg?"

I answered in the negative, but added that there was a man with a wooden leg at the inn. He at once began to question me about this man, not yet having seen him himself, and I told him all I knew and all I had heard. Of course he told me nothing in return, though I heard him chuckling to himself, and his face betrayed the fact that he was pleased about something. I acted as his guide to the jail, and when in the presence of the sheriff he said:

"I want you to go with me to overhaul the man with the wooden leg at the tavern."

The sheriff, detective and constable, with two or three other citizens, proceeded to the inn and to Gordon's room. He was cool and quiet and offered cigars all around, but those who were watching him saw him grow pale as the sheriff began by begging his pardon and hoped no offense would be taken, but would he let them look at his wooden leg.

Gordon flattered and bluffed and was reaching for his pistol under his pillow when the detective seized him. When they had him securely bound they unstrapped his wooden leg, and, lo, his left foot was there as right as any man's.

Yes, he was the man who had robbed the merchant and the postmaster, and he was also the murderer of Squire Higgins. On the evidence worked up by the detective in a couple of hours' time Gordon was tried, convicted and hanged, and every dollar of the stolen money went back to the rightful owners.

Greensburg

Excitement has been high here this week when a number of warrants were issued for the arrest of bootleggers, blacks and whites. Warrants were issued for the arrest of L. P. Bardin, a stove dealer and manufacturer here and for three men working under him—Tom Carter, Austin Gregory and Lee Bishop; and for Mitt Smith, June Hunter and Fred McDougal. More than forty witnesses appeared before the Court of Inquiry held Saturday morning and afternoon, with C. E. Graham, the newly commissioned Police Judge sitting. The wholesale distribution of liquor by bootleggers in the town and County has been responsible for a large amount of disorderly conduct and drunkenness of minors and good citizens are up in arms, ready to assist in every way possible to scourge the country of this evil as far as possible. The town has had detectives here for sometime and it is through their vigilance that these warrants were issued. General Deputy Collector T. Sloan Eastland and Revenue Agent, B. B. Bouldin, both of Louisville arrived on the scene Friday afternoon. Trials have been set for Tuesday March 10th.

A Mrs. Chamberland, of Bedford, Ind., who formerly lived here, read an account in the

Mr. Charles R. Cabell, of this place, last week purchased of Mr. Tom Dowell, at Gresham, his splendid farm for $10,000. Mr. Dowell will later take possession of the Diddle farm which he bought recently at Gradyville and Mr. Cabell will not take possession of the Dowell farm until the latter part of the year.

The Presbyterian Womans Missionary Society met with Mrs. W. H. C. Sandidge this week. The Society is preparing its annual March program which will be given at the Presbyterian Church March 15th. Their subject will be "The American Indian."

During the extremely cold weather of the past week, Mr. Joe Underwood, an aged citizen, living near Sand Lick, this county, was frozen to death. He lived alone but near to an adopted daughter, Mrs. Nelson, who with her husband, Will Nelson attended to his wants. Mr. Underwood had wandered from his bed and was found lying on the floor, the covers pulled from the bed. When found the next morning, he had been dead about eight hours. Mr. Nelson left him at bedtime the night before, telling him he would be back early the next morning to make a fire for him, when he found him dead. Mr. Underwood had been a life long member of the Primitive Baptist Church at Sand Lick. His funeral and burial took place there.

There was a birthday dinner at Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Grants in honor of Nat Bailey. There was a large attendance and all reported a nice time. His friends and relatives gathered in about 10 o'clock with well-filled baskets
